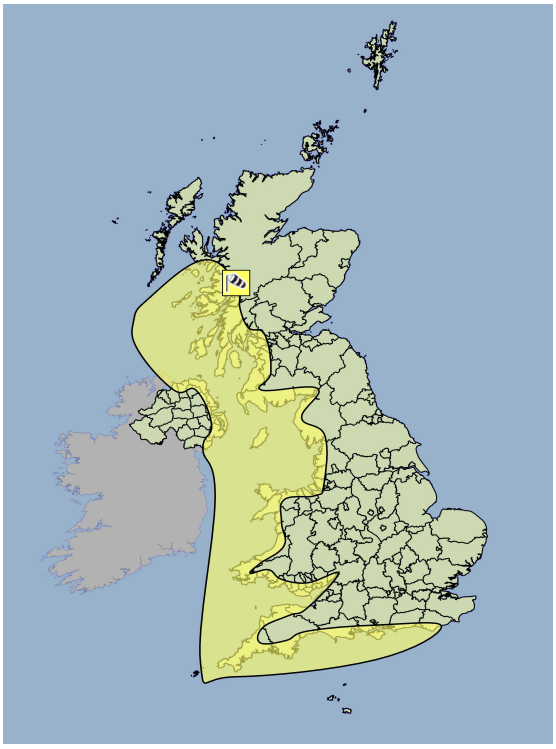
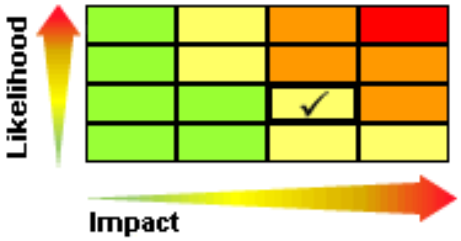
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A developing Atlantic low pressure system is expected to move northeastwards just to the west of Scotland on Friday. This will push further bands of locally heavy rain across the UK and winds will gust to around 50-60 MPH over coasts and hills. Whilst this is not especially strong, lowering pressure will combine with high tides around the UK coastline and bring the risk of some flooding.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Wind

Valid from 00:05 on Fri, 03rd Jan 2014 until 23:59 on Fri, 03rd Jan 2014

Another spell of unsettled weather is expected on Friday with further wet and windy conditions likely across western areas in particular. Tides will be very high, and the public should be aware of the risks of large waves and coastal flooding.
